Read What Those who Know Say About our College

Fredericksburg, Va., June, 1910. As an institution of learning the College takes a high place among us, with a moral tone exalted as any college with which I am acquainted. The Board of Professors are well equipped for their work, being good, capable men and women.

Mr. S. W. Somerville: Dear Sir—I think that a student at Fredericksburg College profits more for the amount expended than any school that I have been able to find; because of this, and the important fact that it is under religious influence and is morally a clean school, I wish my son to remain until he graduates. Sincerely yours, Rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, King George.

Mr. S. W. Somerville: I have long been familiar with the management of this College; have had sons partially educated there, and have found that the boys and girls therein trained have reflected great credit upon it. For good scholarship, for Christian and moral up-building it has few equals. Any one having the welfare of children or wards at heart can do no better than to patronize this school. Its curriculum is up to the best standards.

There is no institution of learning to whose guardianship parents can commit their boys or girls with fuller confidence and satisfaction as to their moral and spiritual interests. (Signed) J. H. HENDERLITE, Pastor Presbyterian Church.

Mr. S. W. Somerville: Dear Sir—Having had two daughters taking the regular collegiate course, and one of them must in addition, for the past three years, I am in a position to appreciate the high character of instruction given in both departments. Very truly yours, RALPH IZARD, Farmer.

Prof. F. A. Franklin, Fredericksburg College, Fredericksburg, Va.: My Dear Sir—I went direct from Fredericksburg College to the Law Department of the University of Virginia, and found the training I received amply sufficient to enable me to get my B. L. degree within the two years prescribed at that time by the University. Yours very truly, WM. W. BUTZNER, Commonwealth's Attorney.

As a patron of Fredericksburg College, it gives me pleasure to recommend it. Its physical, mental and moral training are most excellent, and I regard it as one of the best schools in Virginia. J. E. MASON, Judge Fifteenth Circuit.

Especially would I commend the College for its moral influence, and where formation of character along right lines is of supreme importance to any parent, this institution deserves consideration. If education is more than mental culture, then this institution merits patronage for its training of the scholar mentally, morally, spiritually. Rector St. George's Church.

Prof. F. A. Franklin, Director Musical Department, Fredericksburg College: Dear Sir—The College is fortunate in having your services, and the large number of enthusiastic patrons is the best evidence of the esteem in which the department is held. Very truly yours, J. W. ADAMS, Merchant.

There is a home life about the College and a courtesy and consideration for the students and the faculty that is especially attractive and desirable. I do not know of any school where parents can with greater safety trust their children for the prosecution of their studies and for a careful, painstaking moral training. Editor and Tax Collector.

My little daughter Frances has been a pupil in the Primary Department of Fredericksburg College for the past two years, and I am very much pleased with her progress. H. M. ECKENRODE, D. D. S.

This is to certify that I believe the Musical Department of Fredericksburg College conducted in an efficient and painstaking manner. HENRY WARDEN, Farmer.

It gives me great pleasure to testify of my appreciation of Fredericksburg College. I have had two boys there for several years, and the marked improvement in studies and general deportment of each I attribute largely to the College and its association. J. P. ROWE, Merchant.

The College is a decided factor in the moral uplift of our city, and her students have always made a fine impression upon our people. I know many of them personally, and am always ready to serve them in any way possible. Faithfully yours, R. AUBREY WILLIAMS, Pastor Baptist Church.
